ENGINEERS KILLED
IN INTERIOR OF CHINA

Four Unexplained Reports Received From Shan Sui Tell of Death of English Foreigners—Shan Sui, a Chinese—British—Constitutional Monarchy Proposed.

Tientsin, Dec. 8.—The first direct and unexpected news received from Shan Sui since the recent outbreak there was brought here today by messenger. It consists of letters to the British and American legations and the director of the Shan Sui—Constitutional Monarchy Proposed.

They are now safe, said the letters, but the lawless are the majority. We had hoped to escape down the Man river, but the road is dangerous. The Shan Sui are now in a state of anarchy. Twenty-two at least, including children, are American. Many cannot be sent home as the main have been killed and the banks have been burned.

This letter is signed by V. J. P. of the Christian and Missionary Alliance at the Shan Sui, which is dated November 26.

A limited number of copies of the letter will be made and distributed.

The terms which the imperial delegates will take to Shanghai or Nanjing in an endeavor to settle the dispute in dispute between the government and the Shan Sui are believed to be, first, that the emperor shall be recognized, though he will be elected without power, second, that the president and cabinet shall be elected by the nation and the president shall possess the same authority as the president of a republic, and third, that the foreign consuls are accepted, the government will grant provincial autonomy.

Rebels Blowing up Railway.

Shanghai, Dec. 8.—A telegram received from Nan Sui says that General Chang Hui has commanded the imperial troops, who with a force of eight hundred men up the Ten Ping railway. Further northward from the scene of this fight, the revolutionaries are reported to be blowing up bridges and dynamite.

Wu Ting Fang proposed ignorance of the decision of the rebels at Wu Chang to accept a constitutional monarchy with Yang Shou Kai, who revelation of Chinese. Canton, China, Dec. 8.—The revolution long expected and long in preparation has come. "Foreign revolutionaries" have been accustomed to reports of conspiracies and anti-imperialist movements that even they were accused when the revolution broke in the Canton and other provinces.

The driving motive of the revolution is economic, and as such as political. The improvement of the Chinese is probably far greater than it was a generation ago. The people have been more hardy by the revolution even during the last years than they were previous to the revolution. The presence of the imperial government and the provincial government for money has crushed the mass of the people until their misery has afforded the revolutionary a convincing argument that the time has come to turn out the Manchus and create if possible a liberal and more compassionate government.

Insurgent Leaders Confident.

The extreme weakness of the central government, a weakness that has been more marked since 1900 than before in the general case, the insistent leaders confidence that they would be able to make headway against any force that the imperialists might send against them. The chairman of the secret society, Communist feeling, the necessity of the individual being supported by the masses, the necessity of the revolutionary secret societies extending to the masses, the necessity of the revolutionaries to include a membership of several millions, the control of their centralization in a small group of extreme.

The political poster and leaflet has been largely the means of preparing the mass of the people for the revolution. The work of the secret societies has been directed to circulating single sheet pamphlets or pasting up little inflammatory posters, discrediting the army, narrowing specific instances of the ruthlessness of the Manchu tax gatherers, the neglect of the people to those who assumed to be paternal benefactors, the weakness of the Peking government, and the numerous other allegations undermining the fear and the respect of the people for their despotic rulers.

To Follow Japan's Example.

A single feature has been the attitude of the student class. Those educated abroad have largely interested in Japan. They seek to follow in the footsteps of new Japan, which succeeded in riding the country of foreign intervention and in becoming a great power within the term of an ordinary life.

Thousands of these bright men and energetic youths are scattered throughout the country preaching the teaching that China is cursed by the weakness of its own government, leading to the foreigners, and that help, progress and security can only come by uprooting the existing order and creating upon the principle of China for the Chinese. Although these agitators, including all those educated in Japan, are naturally anti-Japanese.

PEKING'S PARLIAMENT BUILDING. In the building in Tientsin, for the National Congress, the Russian army is now at work on this building and expect to install the Russian provincial government there in a few days, if the place is not taken to pieces by their shrapnel before Tientsin is taken—Copyright by Underwood.

The correspondent will not endeavor to predict the result of the present far-reaching insurrection. It seems likely to succeed, but the foreign observers have a profound distrust of the present capacity of the Chinese for republican institutions in the western sense. Since the revolution succeeded, the government will probably be a military dictatorship in which perhaps some able and just individuality will be in command. The revolutionary appears to have many leaders truly patriotic and with aims beyond the passion of piling up private fortunes.

Japan Watching Revolution.

Mukden, Manchuria, Dec. 8.—Japan watches the development of the revolution in southern China with abhorrent attention. The results of civil war in China must within the year of substantial observers here, have a profound influence on every Asiatic power, and upon Japan most of all. Japanese statesmanship in its relations to the Asiatic mainland must have always in mind that there alone has Japanese expansion found place with-out coming into collision with a European or an American power.

The Japanese press and the Japanese government have apparently accepted the fact that the white races the way to civilization in Australia, Canada, United States and in Asia beyond the confines of China.

One need not reach a conclusion now as to whether Japan would have used the railway and southern Manchuria to China upon the expiration of the railway lease. Certainly the disorder in southern China and the extreme weakness of the imperial government at Peking cause respectful Japanese officials to feel that southern Manchuria is more than ever Japanese.

Declares His Independence.

The victory of Manchuria has declared his independence. Immediately following that announcement, the Yokohama Special Bank, a Japanese government institution, has had a victory several million dollars. The foreign observers here consider this as guaranteed by a political change upon southern Manchuria. Now the Japanese vested right in Manchuria is considered to run until such a time as the provincial government of Manchuria can repay this loan. It is understood that the independent Chinese government of Manchuria proceeds under Japanese advice.

The sectional rivalry between Manchuria and southern China is such that the southern revolutionary chiefs appear to care very little for what becomes of Manchuria and Manchuria, so that it is likely that in the event of a strong public or dictatorship being elected, the insurance the new government would not come into serious collision with either Japan or Russia over what either country might do in Manchuria or in Northern China.

Not Disposed to Intervene.

Although Japanese statesmanship will probably avail itself of every opportunity created by the changing governmental conditions in the Chinese empire, yet there appears to be no disposition to add to the difficulties or to intervene in any manner beyond the borders of Manchuria.

The aim of Japanese policy seems now as before the outbreak of the revolution to be in the direction of encouraging an effective movement in the Chinese empire and the development of the splendid resources lying unused. Japan needs time to consolidate her interests in Korea and in Manchuria. Her geographical position to the Chinese markets and the skill in special knowledge of Japanese traders make the Chinese content that they will obtain a large share of the advantages of high economic development of the Chinese people without further territorial extension.

More Jaw's Population 20,000.

More Jaw Saw's Dec. 8.—More Jaw's population is 20,000. These are the figures officially given out by the board of trade. The census was taken on November 14th, when a large staff had been making exhaustive scrutiny and a complete card index of the result of this effort is in the city can now claim perhaps the most complete and detailed census yet taken in the west with every name individually touched.

RUSSIA SEEMS SATISFIED. Paris, Dec. 8.—The Paris Temps today prints an interesting interview with the Russian foreign minister, M. Sazonoff, whose visit here is regarded by the French press as a kindly re-affirmation of the Russo-France entente, after saying that the European situation in his opinion was not serious.

M. Sazonoff declared that Russia's demonstration of good will toward Persia had not been reciprocated, that Russia had been obliged to seek for complete satisfaction. It was not the intention of the Russian government to permit the national dignity or commercial interests of the country to be compromised. M. Sazonoff denied that Russia had yet officially proposed the question of the opening of the Dardanelles to Russian warships. In conclusion, he referred to the unity and solidity of the triple entente declaring that his country's alliance with France and Britain to be the basis of Russia's foreign policy.
